

DETACH

Detaches an object from the `ObjectManager`, causing a managed object to become detached. Unflushed changes made to the object if any (including removal of the object), will not be synchronized to the database. Objects which previously referenced the detached object will continue to reference it.

REFRESH

Refreshes the persistent state of an object from the database, overriding any local changes that have not yet been persisted.